WELCOME TO PETHAM

Please accept this booklet as a welcome to our community, giving you all the information we believe will help you to feel at home here.

Petham is just a short drive or bus journey away from the centre of Canterbury, and you will see from the Village Directory (below) that although many of the local services, such as shops and Post Office are no longer in Petham, the neighbouring villages of Lower Hardres, Chartham, Bridge and Stelling Minnis together provide most facilities and services. In Petham there is the Primary School, Church and Village Hall that provides a flourishing community involved in activities and interests for all ages, from the pre-school play group and Baby and Toddler group to Adult Studies, bingo and whist, and we still have a friendly local pub, The Chequers on Stone Street

Petham is a large rural parish with a small population. In October 2013 Action with Communities in Rural England (ACRE) published profiles for rural communities and 710 people were then resident in Petham. In 2010 a Parish Plan had been completed for Petham and from the surveys done the statistics for the ages of the population were compiled (see below).

We hope that you will settle in quickly. Please do get in touch with the relevant contacts listed in the Village Directory with any questions you may have.

Linda Spratt
Chair, Petham Parish Council

History, Geography and Environment of Petham Parish

Set in a valley on the northern edge of the North Downs, Petham has always had very close associations with the land and agriculture. There is evidence of Roman occupation and the Roman road (Stone Street) from Canterbury (Durovernum Cantiacorum) to Lympe (Lemanis) runs along the modern day eastern boundary of the parish. Throughout the next 1500 years, after the departure of the Romans, most changes in the settlements which make up the current parish (the village centre, Garlinge Green, Kenfield, Stone Street and Swarling) were directly related to land ownership and agriculture, both of which were affected by major events like the Black Death in 1348-9 and the Reformation in the sixteenth century. Historically the Bridge and Petham Hundred included Petham, Lower Hardres and Nackington, Upper Hardres, Bridge and Patribourne, and Waltham.

Major changes in agricultural practices and the ownership and management of land resulted from the mechanisation stimulated by the First World War, and the intensive farming practices demanded during and after the Second World War. This led to a dramatic decline in the number of local people employed in farming. Most orchards and hop gardens have disappeared, together with many of the families long associated with the land. Few people still both live and work in the village, but the changing seasons continue to be marked by the farming activities.

Improvements in communications and transport, particularly the motor car, have transformed the lives of the residents, but despite a request for a 30 mph limit in 1936 it was not until 1985, all but fifty years later, that the speed limit was introduced in the centre of the village.

The arrival of mains water (by 1931) and sewerage (1972), the telephone exchange (1930s) and electricity (1938), but not gas, have also helped to create the modern environment of Petham. Street lighting was originally thought too expensive when first considered in 1938 and consequently the first lamps were not installed until 1981. There have been significant changes in house ownership and occupation in both the centre and rural fringes of the parish with many improvements to older houses, and new residential properties providing a pleasant and sought after environment for professionals and the retired. But, after the final demolition of Tarry Hall Cottages in Watery Lane in the 1930s, the social housing, built at Chequers Orchard and Town Road in the 1930s and Tillard Close in the early 1960s, has helped to create a wide community which has managed to remain for many much more than merely a dormitory village.

The success of the school, the role of the church and the support for, and full use of, the new Village Hall (opened in 2005), together with the development of leisure related businesses have all contributed to modern Petham. After a dozen or so very successful years, attracting up to 50 local young people, the organisers retired recently and as no one was prepared to take over the running of the Youth Club, it has been closed, although it is hoped that with support from the local community and the local government it will be re-opened to provide much appreciated activities within the village. Kenfield Hall, just off the Garlinge Green Road, was the site of one of the earliest cricket matches in 1760, a picture of which was painted by William Pratt. The original is at Lords, but a copy is held by the Kenfield Cricket Club.

The Parish is an unmistakably rural environment, a Conservation Area and an important part of the Kent Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB). This means that there are restrictions on new development, on external alterations to existing houses (such as extensions, external cladding and installation of satellite dishes), and demolition of buildings. Trees with a trunk diameter greater than 7.5 cm at 1.5 m above the ground (except for certain garden and orchard fruit trees) may not be felled or lopped without approval, for which Canterbury City Council needs six weeks' notice in writing.

Petham occupies an area of the North Downs where a light, free-draining soil liberally scattered with flints overlies a chalky subsoil. Rainfall drains rapidly through the chalk, collecting above a stratum of impervious clay to form a subterranean reservoir. After periods of heavy rainfall the water level rises to create surface springs and temporary watercourses known as nailbournes. The Petham Nailbourne begins with the appearance of water in Marble Pond, opposite the village hall. It is fed by various springs from higher up the valley and a stream then flows from Marble Pond along the edge of the Recreation Ground, under Town Road by the converted chapel and past Swarling and Perry Court to join the Stour near Shalmsford Street. It is reputed (erroneously) to run every seven years or as a portent of national disaster. In 2000 and 2014 the water level was exceptionally high, with fields, roads and gardens under water for a time.

The countryside around Petham and particularly the woodlands are, like so many throughout the country, under threat as coppiced woods can no longer be sustainably managed in the traditional way practised for centuries. However, land owners, farmers, The Woodland Trust and The Forestry Commission now work closely with the Parish Council and the local Environment Group to monitor and maintain the environment in the Parish, which among other things forms part of an important area for butterfly conservation .

Weather records for Petham were kept by local farmer Tom Castle for some fifty years and published monthly in Petham and Waltham Parish News. For the past two years or so the recording has been provided by Peter Coombs. The area enjoys a dry climate, with above average sunshine and an annual rainfall of approximately 30 inches. However, the valley is a frost pocket and, although recent winters have been milder, winter temperatures of -10°C or lower have often been recorded.
